Gateway Homes of Greater Richmond offers supportive in-home service to adults with mental health problems. Gateway is a nonprofit organization located on 30 acres of land in Chesterfield County, that provides a transitional living program designed to help individuals - who suffer from Schizophrenia, Bipolar Disorder or Depression - to live as independently as possible. Gateway's program is clinically focused and comprehensive and designed to serve the psychological, physical, social, vocational and educational needs of the residents.

The Supported Apartment Program is Gateways second level of care, and offers on-campus apartment living for residents, with continued psychosocial rehabilitation. Staff counselors work with residents weekdays to help them begin to live as they would out in the community, but still within Gateway's supportive environment. The focus at this level is to help residents increase personal responsibility, refine daily living skills, build vocational skills and prepare for independent living.

Gateway's three levels of service consist of the Assessment Program, Supported Apartment Program and Community Support Services.
